FALL OF PORT ARTHUR.

WHEN THE RUSSIAN military authorities were considering the events that followed amply demonstrated the wisdom of Kuropatkin's is time for the people to know about it.

Port Arthur has fallen after a resistance so desperate, so heroic, so manful, that Stoessel, though defeated, will be fleet than a boy 10 years old. WATER BONDS AND SEWAGE-"BONDS. YES."

To The Sait Lake Herald:

On the lith inst., when the Real Estate exchange, as an association, considered the advisability of the city's voting bonds for the purpose of increasing its water supply, the president of the association arrogantly ruled that no minority report, favorable or adverse, could be submitted. With all due deference to such ruling. I claim the "guaranteed right of petition" and here and now register my unalterable opposition to the resolutions then and upon such question adopted by the exchange, and deny the truth, the justice and the philosophy thereof.

The men of straw set up by Mr. Dooly seem to have inspired many with the idea that they are real bogies, and his sophistry has boodwinked many others. I refer to his objections to the manner of measurements as provided in the contract. The city's representatives in securing a modification of the contract in that respect, eliminates that phase of the contract from discussion.

His proposal to huild the conduit and buy absolute title to water from time to time is fairly good, but subject to the possibility of a failure to deliver. The irrigation laws of this arid region are peculiar. When all the waters of a stream have been appropriated and used for a series of years by a hundred or more individuals, the courts have repeatedly held that not one of those owners could sell his proportion thereof to the detriment of his co-owners. That is to say, that an owner of a given number of inches of water in a ditch will not be allowed to sell the same to thereafter to be diverted at or near its source. The reasons are obvious. All the water of that ditch must bear its proportion, which same is enormous in the heat of summer. To illustrate: Suppose ten persons own all the water a certain ditch will carry, and that this ditch is two miles long. Then suppose that the seven owners nearest the point where the water is taken from the cannot per the city to the analyse of the ditch. This means that the party purchasing cannot get all the water he bought, or t banded and economically used, will be ample for many years to come, They base their contention upon the city's population and its ratio of increase. If the population and its ratio of increase. If the population of Sait Lake City in 1899 was 48,000, and in 1990, 53,000—a gain in ten years of 5,000—that in seventy years hence—the span of life of a yet umborn child—the population of Sait Lake City would only be about 90,000. This is mere sophistry. With a settlement of the rivairy between the Commercial club and the Real Estate exchange, an amalgamation of Utah's many political parties, to gether with the establishment of complete harmony among warring religions. Sait Lake ought to grow and prosper like the proverbial green bay tree, and her population seventy years hence, instead of being 30,000, should at least be $1,000. Of all the proposals for increasing our water supply, it seems to me that Spring creek is far and away the best and cheapest. It is purely and simply an immense spring of mountain water, pure and cold. It comes out of the ground like a verifiable geyser, and in volume is double the combined flow of City creek. Emigration and Parley's. The city engineer tells me that in August, 1902, the water supply of Sait Lake City from City creek. Emigration and Parley's creek was 8,000,328 gallons in twenty-four hours. At the same time the flow from Spring creek was 14,000,000 gallons. That the flow from the three first named streams in December, 1902, was 5,554,726 gallons in twenty-four hours, and that the flow from Spring creek remained the same—14,000,000 gallons. It never varies in volume winter or summer, one year or another. Some say that it's not as pure as it should be. This sisted. Why? It is evident that the canal would have to be normally full in order to carry the quantity of water rightfully belonging to the three owners at the tail end of the ditch. This means that the party purchasing cannot get all the water he bought, or the three tailenders would suffer and the courts have determined that these people shall not suffer. Now, sir, should the city buy as suggested by I m. Doolv it cannot get but a portion of the water bargained and paid for.

I hope that I have made clear how hazardous it would be for the city to attempt to secure fee title to a part and not all of the farmers water. This hazard does not exist in case of an exchange.

Many object to the conditions of the proposed contract and declare that it is wholly in the interest of the farmer-as sort of Shylock affair. That view is in part right and in part wrong. Keep in sight the fact that the farmer has something which the city wants and really cannot well do without. Put yourself in the place of this same farmer. Wouldn't you exact the pound of flesh? That goes without saying, and the $50,000 or $90,000—15 simply "boot" money, and if you want to trade with the farmer you must accept his terms.

The proviso in the contract relative to damages in event of inability of the city to deliver the required amount of water when most needed by the farmers is the most serious of all contingents.
